The first 100 days as CEO at the City of Albany

What can be achieved in 100 days? Faileen James will share her stories from airports to maintenance to Yakamia creek rehabilitation, and the challenges faced in her first 100 days in Albany.

Faileen James is a highly regarded change maker, known for her capacity to deliver strategic governance and operational leadership, arriving to Albany recently from one of Queensland's largest government departments. Some in the Albany Community are apparently considering the Albany City leadership as "bf" or "af" – before or after Faileen's arrival in Albany.

Ms James broad employment skills have been of great value to Albany in just a short time, with a background in human services, law and business, including a Master of Business Administration from the University of Queensland. Ms James brings a wealth of experience into her new role in Albany.

Find out more about how Faileen's management and knowledge of large, complex and diverse organisations has already been of benefit to the City and her personal journey to Amazing Albany.
